We have before us a resily brilliant review of the situation—as graphic and unexcited as a sketch in history—as concise as a budget—desunded of the vague and clumay moralization which is so often mistaken for statemenship by those of our politicians who have acquired just culture snough to lead them into the delinaire mists of speculation.

Mr. Pendleton speaks of national affairs as wise and honest man of business would speak of the affairs of commerce, and his clear and business-like statement loses no part of its spirit or its candor for the couriesy which pervades it. Nothing could be more praceful or more tolerant, at the same time that nothing could be more reasonable, than his reference to the mass of the Republicans, and particularly to those of them whom he describes at his personal friends, but the instance is noteworthy chiefly because it is rare. He respects the Secretary of the Treasury if he does not respect Mr. Boutwell, and even here—where if over invective is justifiable it would be appropriate and applicable—he does not raise the tone of his voice above the pitch of a gentleman, nor vary the temperature of his language. would have judged of it just as the press generally now judges of it. To every dis-interested mind, its shourdity, as well as its shooking violation of all the proprieties and decencies, is palpable. It can have been written and printed only for gross, sllegiti-mate, and selfish purposes—written and printed only by parties who sought thereby to manufacture notoriety and coin money out of material that defiles the touch. Neither Mrs. Stowe nor the Atlantic, we, apprehend, will ever recover from the of-fects of it. They will be remembered as pimping, at the expense of all truth and pimping, at the expense of all truth and probability, to low and beauty tastes and appetites. The manager of the new Vienna operahouse has just taken a bold step in a new direction. He has caused notifications to be just up in various parts of the house that no bonquets will be allowed to be thrown on the stage. At one fell swoop he has thus cut of from the prima domnas and ballet dancers one of their most theirshed privileges, for these flowers, put into fresh water and hurried around to another thesier, could either be bired or sold, to be tossed on the stage. In many of the theaters the throwing of flowers on to the stage had grown to be such as inш

A Nobe Best-black.

Florence has now a novel senastion. A sheemaker, about forty years of age, usmed Carlo Ricci, who claims to be a member of the illustrious Italian family of that name, and to which the Countees Walewska belongs, has estomished the town by opening a cobbler's shall right in front of the celebrated Ricci Palses. In proof of his nobility he displays over his blacking-bor a card, on which is written Casediers Lustrano. The ricastrudes of great families are not confined to England, as Sir Barand Burke may suppose, from his book on the subject. The researches of some learned genealogist into the history of the many noble families of lally and France would reveal a great deal of interesting information as to what the descendants of various distinguished men are earning a living by. Watte in Europe people begin at the top of the ladder and work down; here it is just the other way, they begin at the bottom of the ladder and work down; here it is just the other way, they begin at the bottom of the ladder and work down; here it is just the other and elimb, and, like the monkeys, the higher they climb the more they show their tails.

amour between those that are prom-marriage, hath the condition that it the land of olle positions, castanets, and bull fights."

THE New York Sun, an independent Radical sheet, is rather heavy on our very able and very distinguished friend, Robenon, of the Navy. It says: "When the English authorities in Jamales learned that Mr. John Ferguson, an English subject, had been imprisoned by the Spanisards at Manasaillo, two men-of-war were sent there to demand his release, and compellit by bombarding the town if the demand was not compiled with. The powerful iron-clast of H. B. M. Navy, the Vestal, Capt. Hunter, appeared off Manasaillo, and Mr. Ferguson's release was demanded. Gov. Ampudi at first refused to comply, but when Capt. Hunter said his orders were to take him away, peaceably or forcibly, Gov. Ampudi wisely concluded to surresuder him. That, however, is not the method which Admiral Porter and those Ancient Mariners. Borie and Robeson, have adopted in the case of American citizens who have falles into the hands of the Spanish soldiery in Cubs. They have allowed them to be esteed and shot, without any attempt to protect them. The reason was that they wanted the Taliapoosa at home for a steam yasht, while they sent the Sabine on a unsiese fancy cruise to Europe, taking the men and officers who might have saved the lives of our unfortunate fellow countrymen in that luckless island." Craig type might avail herself of—for, farther on one reads 'but if the man shall have had a Riss for his money, he shall lose one-half of that which he gave.' A chivairous estimate to put upon this little piece of feminine endearment, truly! The ladies though (God bless them) come off with colors flying, and a perfectly established right to play the interesting 'told role of 'linjun-giver' whenever they like, for it is disductly asserted that 'kissing or no kissing, whatever she gave she may ask and have it again.' How admirably this chimes in with the mood of the belles who habitually receive all and give nothing, unless it be dead leaves in exchange for the pure gold of a good and honorable man's affection
